(Special to The Evening World.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 .- For the second dme in less than two yaers Lolita Armour, the six-year-old daugter of J. Ogden Armour and one of the richest children in the world, will undergo an signed to allow her to walk and run and romp like other little girls.

Prof. Adolph Lorenz, the Viennes country, with an asistant, to perform the operation, will collect close to $100,-000 for his fee and the expenses of the assistant and himself, which makes this incubator Armour baby a most expensive child.

mother, who was Miss Lolita Sheldon, of Connecticut, was a mite of a baby when she was born. She weighed but a little over three pounds, and the eminent physician who assisted at the birth were fearful that she would not survive unless some means of furnishing her with vitality were devised. Extraordinary Care Landshied o Her.

A special incubator, built along models approved by the greatest authorities, was constructed for Lolita. She was placed in this incubator and remained there for three months in an atmosphere of perpetual midsummer. Nurses be attempted. were in attendance every minute of the

Three Years in a Rolling Chair. So little Lolita spent nearly three ery regard to her health and strength. or a time it was hoped that absolute would enable Nature to remedy the mistake she had made, but investigation by the X-ray showed that while the child had grown quite strong and the child had grown quite strong and extremely pretty, the malformed condition of the hip-bones had not been remedied.

Dr. John Ridion, of Chicago, a renowned specialist in orthopedics, who had been in charge of the Armour baby from the time the hip-bone deformity was discovered, decided that she was strong enough to undergo an operation, Finally Christmas Day was decided upon for the operation, but the mother would not hear of the plan and demanded a postponement.

Lolita played with her dolls and other Christmas presents until Dec. 28, when all was in readiness for the operation. Dr. Ridlon, with two assistants, went to the Armour home, Lolita was placed under the influence of anaesthetics, the tendons of the legs were stretched and the hip joints were forced into their was placed in a plaster cast that made movement of the lower limbs impossible. For four months she remained encased in this. When it was removed Dr. Ridion announced that after a few months' inclosure in a lighter cast the child would be able to walk.

The agony of expectancy of the mother and father as the day approached when the trial was to be made may be imagined. Experiments showed that, while the child was in a recumbent position she was able to move her limbs and there was no apparent deformity from an examination of the hips.

The X-ray machine photographs recorded that the hip joints were placed where they should be, the muscles and ligaments were apparently in their proper positions and there was no doubt in the mind of the surgeon that Lolita Armour would be able, after practice, to do something she had never done in her life-stand on her feet and walk.

The Little Joints Slipped. Disappointment of the keenest nature resulted from the trial. All the pain and anxiety had gone for naught. The little one could not sustain the weight of her frail body, the hip joints slipped up from the sockets and rested against the bore as they had before, and the slender rauscles were once more displaced.

News of the failure of the operation was not given out. It had been supposed unt'l a few days ago that the child was Bears the on the road to recovery. In the mean-time the best specialists in America had examined her, and all had agreed that
